

JUNIOR LEAGUE OF RHODE ISLAND

Katie Taylor, Communications Council Director

Katie Taylor has been a member of the Junior League of Rhode Island (JLRI) since 2017, having just completed her New Member Education in May 2018. She looks forward to serving as Communications Council Director and is most excited to lend a fresh look and feel to the online presence of the League and amplifying its community presence.

Born and raised in Ohio, Katie attended Culver Academies--an independent boarding school in northern Indiana, before returning to Oxford, Ohio to earn a B.S. in Marketing from Miami University. As a student, Katie was initiated into the Delta Delta Delta National Women's Fraternity and served as her collegiate chapter's Vice President of Public Relations. Katie moved to Rhode Island in April of 2017 and resides in the historic Federal Hill neighborhood of Providence with her husky, Tito.

Katie works in downtown Providence as a digital marketing manager at Blue Cross & Blue Shield of Rhode Island. Although a recent transplant to Rhode Island, Katie has wasted no time getting involved in community activities. Her involvement in the JLRI led her to pursue a volunteer opportunity with the Real Connections program at Foster Forward--a mentorship program that pairs adults with children and teens in foster care. She is a mentor to a 15 year-old girl and enjoys their time spent trying new activities together.

You may find Katie trying out a new, challenging hobby any day of the week. She began training in Brazilian Jiu Jitsu at Team Santos Fighting Academy, a local martial arts school that focuses on advancing these skills in a competitive setting. She has since competed in several local jiu jitsu tournaments and continues to look for exciting new ventures, from rock climbing to writing her own comedy sets. Katie hopes to one day collaborate on a hit podcast, TV series, or film.
